

Reunion: Meal Planning 2009

The meals will be shared by all who attend! Each household will be responsible for bringing food for two meals. Talk to those in your group to divide the food groups between yourselves.

- Singles should plan on making a dish to serve 8
- Households with more than a single should plan to serve 12
- Consider kids size about a half portion from an adult
- Please be aware that we have two peanut allergies in the family, so avoid putting nuts in your dish, or clearly label it

In addition to the planned meals, most of you are assigned to bring food for the Saturday buffet. Dinners will be BYOB (or leftover beverages from bkfst/lunch)

Your assigned food to bring is to the left of your name which appears 3 times.

The main dish will be provided for Friday and Saturday night meals. Paper products and charcoal will be available, and the Inn has dishes, silverware, glasses and other cooking tools as well as an ice machine. A charcoal grill stand is available outside the Inn for BBQ.

If you don't like your food group, get in touch with others to swap; Also recommend you compare notes with others in your food category to assure there is a mix of eats!

KITCHEN DUTY: With the exception of the Wine and Cheese Tasting on Friday evening and the Pot Luck Dinner on Saturday night, you have been assigned specific KP duties. You will notice next to your name either "prep" or "clean up". That means that you either help with meal preparation or clean up afterward. Each person is only assigned for one duty. Couples can decide which of them will prep and which one will clean up. (These will be at different meals.) Singles are only assigned once.

As to the Wine Tasting duties...whoever is listed to bring something for that time frame, then they are asked to put out their food to be shared and then put it away afterward. For the Pot Luck dinner on Saturday night, I resurrect an old Lamb Sunday dinner mantra. It goes like this: "Kitchen...Pitch in...No Bitchin'." However...in order to facilitate this better, I will have a sign up sheet for specific duties posted near the kitchen. Remember: early sign ups get the easy jobs:>) We will need just one person per household for this to work.
